Re: Rejuvenation Pruning

Heavy restorative or regenerative pruning of plants such as Bougainvillea, Tacoma's, Russelias, Lantana, Texas Ranger, and Durantas is necessary to remove old, overgrown limbs so that the plant can grow new branches in their place. While there is a period of 4-6 weeks where plants do not look healthy since they are pruned to the ground, this process is needed to promote new growth.

Timing of regenerative pruning is vital – we recommend heavy trim back of shrubs in Spring (March/April) and again in September. While we understand the concerns of homeowner's as to how the plant material looks now, we ask for patience; in 8-10 weeks the plant material will rebloom. Please refer to the Yearly Calendar attached for further clarification on items completed throughout the year.
